DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claim 1 and 7 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Sakashita (Unexamined Utility Patent 6-009355).

Sakashita discloses in fig.1 an electric motor having a bearing current reduction assembly comprising: a motor housing (A), stator mounted to the housing comprising a bore (B) a rotor shaft (1) extending through the rotor core (8), and a end shield (5) an inner bearing cap (4&5D) substantially radially aligned with the rotor shaft (where in the inner bearing cap comprise a inner end (5d) and the inner end is with in approximately 0.005 inch from the rotor) which acts as a charge concentrator disposed on at least one of the rotor shaft and the inner end. Wherein the charge concentrator is position between the rotor and inner end.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 3-6 and 9-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Sakashita in view of Newberg (4710037).

As seen above Sakashita substantially discloses the claim invention. However, Sakashita do not disclose and end shield with an inner end made of aluminum material. Newberg teaches in fig.3 a bearing retainer structure comprising: an inner end-bearing cap (12) made of aluminum material for the purpose conductivity. Therefore, it would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to modify Sakashita bearing assembly with the teaching of Newberg Bearing retainer structure to eliminate or reduce the build up of electric potentials on the shaft or in the bearings of a motor.

5. Claims 2 and 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Sakashita as applied to claim 1,3-7 and 9-12 above, and further in view of Shiraishi (4,515,417).

As see above Shiraishi substantially discloses the claim invention, and Newberg discloses and end shield with an inner end made of aluminum. However, neither Shiraishi discloses the charge concentrator having an edge.

Shiraishi discloses a bearing assembly in fig.3 comprising: a charge concentrator including an edge disposed on one end of the shaft and an inner end of the bearing cap for the purpose of concentrating an electrical charge. Therefore, it would have be obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the bearing assembly of Sakashita and Newberg with the charge concentrator of Shiraishi for the purpose of short-circuiting the rotor shaft and the end-cover at low speeds.

Response to Arguments

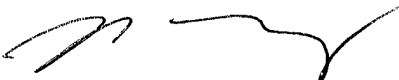

6. Applicant's arguments with respect to claim 1-12 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
